

For the Lodi High School Music Programs, the 2017-2018 year has been an upswing year full of growth and undeniable enhancements. Over the winter break we welcomed, with open arms, a new and passionate and positive Color/Winter Guard coach, Alex Moreno, who worked hard to develop and enhance the Winter Guard, after a 3 year absence of competitive participation. The Winter Guard reboot included the passionate and dedicated involvement of nine students who diligently worked to fine tune, on a weekly basis, their performance while placing 2nd, 4th, and 5th place in their competitions; remarkable for a group in its infancy after a 3 year hiatus. Meanwhile, Winter Percussion successfully marched along with the direction of coaches Jesus Muniz (Lodi High graduate 2014), Ian Rowell (Lodi High graduate 2014) and Anthony D'Angelo (from Sacramento), in pushing percussion to perform above and beyond their expectations in both passion and precision. Winter Percussion fully and successfully embraced their coaches' call to step up their competitive performance to the next level by consistently placing 1st or 2nd place in all of their regional competitions. The success of the LHS music programs, which also includes the brand new addition this year of the Drum Major competition, as well as our Jazz and Orchestra ensembles, could not happen without the dedication, support and guidance of the Lodi High School Band Director, Glen Guevara, as well as the Lodi High Band Boosters.
